

The three cheapest ways to stay at Ojo:

Camp: for $20 a night for the first person, plus $5 for each additional person on the same campsite, this is by far the least expensive way to stay. If you want to jump in the hot springs at night, the “after hours” rate is only $24 and gets you a soak and a nice hot shower.

Stay nearby: there are several B&B's near Ojo that are a little less expensive than staying on the property, in part because they don't include access to the hot springs. So just like the campers, you can pay your $24 for the after hours rate and enjoy the best of the budget and the spa.

Bunk-up: all of the on-site room rates are for the first two occupants of the room, but each additional occupant is only an extra $50/night, which includes access to the spa from the time you arrive until 10:00 pm on the day you depart. In the hotel, that means you could access the hot springs on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday AND stay for two nights for $134.50/per person (plus tax).

	Friday & Saturday lodging	Friday, Saturday & Sunday Spa entry	Total Cost (plus tax) (per person)
Camping (two people sharing a campsite)	$50.00	$24/night/person	$73.00
Off site (two people sharing one room)	$170.00	$24/night/person	$121.00
Hotel room (4 people sharing 2 Queen beds)	$538.00	Included	$134.50
Hotel room (two people sharing either one King or 2 Queen beds)	$338.00	Included	$169.00